I. INTRODUCTION

Nantucket Today

Art studios and galleries, bountiful boutiques, restaurants, the Nantucket Whaling Museum, book, comedy, cranberry, daffodil, film, food, and wine festivals, and regattas make Nantucket one of New England’s chief cultural centers and an international destination for vacationers and second-home owners. The island’s Atlantic Ocean location keeps its temperatures and rains moderate year-round. Its historic district includes late 17th century wooden homes that are simple in design, in keeping with Quaker distaste for ornamental excess; Federal sea-captain and merchant residences with lavish ornament reflecting whaling prosperity; and a large collection of Greek Revival houses, built after the Great Fire of 1846.

Nantucket History (See source notes)

Arable land, ample fishing, lush scenery, ocean vistas, and oasis remoteness have made Nantucket an ideal place to live, work and visit since its 17th century beginnings.

Originally inhabited by some 3,000 Wampanoag natives who capitalized on its bounty of flora, fauna, fish, forests, and beached whales to flourish as a self-governing nation, the island was first sighted and charted by English explorer Bartholomew Gosnold, who called it “the glacier’s gift.” By 1641, it was deeded by British authorities to Watertown merchants Thomas Mayhew and Thomas Mayhew Jr., who farmed, grazed sheep for wool, and whaled for oil on the island and converted many of its natives to Christianity.

In 1659, Merrimack Valley Quakers, fleeing persecution from Puritans, bought an interest in the island from the Mayhews and settled on it as its “first proprietors.” They included Peter Folger, Christopher Hussey, and Thomas Macy, whose descendants included Rowland Hussey Macy, founder of Macy’s department store in New York in 1858, and James A. Folger, founder of Folgers Coffee in California in 1872.

First called Sherburne after the English hometown of some of the settlers, the island was renamed Nantucket - Wampanoag for “faraway land” - in 1795. Soon it grew into New England’s whaling capital, supplying whale oil for streetlights, lamps and candles. Shipbuilding and blacksmith shops, ropewalks, seamen’s boarding houses, and stores sprang up, generating a seaside residential community on Nantucket’s Great Harbor.

By the 1840s, Nantucket’s population had peaked at 9,000 and the influence of its whaling industry extended world-wide. However, New Bedford’s growing whaling market and the increased demand for cheap kerosene from Pennsylvania’s petroleum fields eventually thwarted Nantucket’s whaling industry. Furthering its demise were the Great Fire of 1846, the Great Harbor silting that blocked whaleships, the growth of mainland rail transport, and the mass exodus of Nantucketers to the 1849 California Gold Rush.

The hospitality industry was already nurturing Nantucket’s recovery, however. By 1845, rooming houses and inns were promoting “the invigorating and delightful indulgence of Sea Bathing” as an incentive to summer on Nantucket, which the Nantucket Inquirer editor reported as “becoming quite a fashionable place... If suitable accommodations were provided, [Nantucket] would take a prominent station among the watering places, which collect their crowds during the summer months.”

“SWAIN’S NECK”, NANTUCKET

Nantucket’s first summer hotel was built in the 1870s. Four more followed over the next 10-12 years, along with Nantucket women luring summer boarders into their homes with “large airy rooms” and “nicely cooked bluefish.” Despite the growth of the fledgling tourist industry, gradual depopulation left it a virtual ghost town until the 1950s, when developers began to restore many of the pre- and post-Civil War buildings - preserved through long-term desertion - to create a luxury residential and vacation resort for well-to-do populations in the Northeast United States.

II. PROPERTY DESCRIPTION

“Swain’s Neck” encompasses over 63 acres of lush grasslands, wetlands and forests, enhanced by picturesque panoramas and salty sea breezes. This idyllic, remote and tranquil setting is potentially Nantucket’s most private family retreat. The estate’s winding private driveway gradually reveals a natural wonderment of leas, trees and pastures as it approaches the main residence far out on the peninsula and surrounded by water and manicured grounds. Vast lawns to the rear of the main house provide a smooth transition to the private shore’s sandy walking trail. The 63 acres provide wonderful opportunities for nature walks around the property. For the equestrians, there are two fenced paddocks where the owner has kept horses. For the sports enthusiasts, there is a multi-sport Sports Court (see SportsCourt.com). For boating families, there are two moorings and a boat house in which to keep water toys.

“SWAIN’S NECK”, NANTUCKET

Main Residence

The home is arranged in a C-shape that follows the curve of the shoreline and offers ocean and Polpis Harbor views from all principal rooms. The architecture features many symbols of Nantucket’s Quaker, Colonial, farming and whaling heritage: weathered wood shingles, multiple gables and dormers, farmer’s porches at most entrances, porthole-like oculi and an overall farmhouse-like simplicity in design. The main residence is centered around a two-story great room. The open floor plan is designed to promote a casual and relaxing lifestyle for the family and its guests. The home has approximately 8,000sf and comprises five bedroom suites, including the first-floor master with its sitting room and deck, all with harbor views.

First Floor

- Foyer (8’0” x 27’0”*). The foyer is an integral part of the two-story Great Room (24’0” x 27’3”). Together these rooms provide approximately 900sf of entertaining space.
- Great Room (24’0” x 27’3”*). Guests entering the home are immediately struck by dimensions of the two-story Great Room and its rear double French doors, flanked by twin windows, providing a panoramic view of the sweeping rear lawns and Polpis Harbor. Above a semi-Palladian clerestory window is a cathedral ceiling with exposed painted beams. A notable feature of the room is a Flemish-bond brick fireplace with its Siena marble surround, classic mantel with pilasters, overmantel picture space framed by pilasters, and multiple layers of crown molding. Walls of the Great Room are fully paneled to the height of the crown molding which is capped in cherry to match the hand rail of the bridal staircase. The curved staircase, with its turned balusters, rises to the second-floor gallery overlooking the Great Room.
- Kitchen. The kitchen is part of a large open plan family space comprising the kitchen (19’0” x 21’0”) and the Family Room (23’0” x 17’0”) with its dining area. This combination of open plan rooms is the heart of family life. A wide doorway separates this area from the Great Room. The kitchen is extensively furnished with Brookhaven cabinetry by Wood-Mode (see Wood-Mode.com). Base and wall cabinets around the perimeter are painted and some upper cabinets are glazed for display purposes. Cabinets include an appliance garage and various pantry/storage units with roll-out shelves. The center island has a complimentary cherry finish. The island has a small porcelain prep sink, a stove with overhead pot-and-pan rack and a raised bar from which six guests can be entertained by the chef. The kitchen counters are mainly granite. There are some cherry counters to provide a contrast and to match the center island. The appliance package comprises a Thermador five burner stove with Thermador downdraft extractor, Thermador wall ovens, two Sub-Zero 601R refrigerators, a set of Sub-Zero 700 BR refrigerator drawers and two Bosch dishwashers. There is an additional porcelain double sink with In-Sink-Erator under a bank of windows facing the harbor. Connected to the kitchen is the Pantry (8'6" x 11'6"*) with additional cabinets and a Sub-Zero 601F freezer.

- Family Room (23'0" x 17'0"*) . The family room has two walls each with sliding doors flanked by twin windows providing a panoramic view of the sweeping rear lawns and Polpis Harbor. There is ease of access to the rear decks and a patio with two hard-piped gas grills. The family room has a dining area that can comfortably seat 10-12 people and a sitting area. The sitting area has a Flemish-bond brick fireplace with a classic oak mantel supported by paneled pilasters and paneled overmantel picture space. To the right of the fireplace is a built-in media center with retractable doors. The more time one spends in this area, the more one understands why the open plan nature of these rooms is a draw to family and friends and promotes lively social gatherings.

- Media Room (13'6" x 17'0"*) . The cozy media room provides an escape for family and friends to enjoy a movie or a favorite sporting event. The room has water views and is equipped with surround sound speakers.

“SWAIN’S NECK”, NANTUCKET

- Master Bedroom Suite. The master suite is truly an owners’ sanctuary and comprises approximately 1,600sf with the following amenities:

- Sitting Room (27’0” x 17’9”*). Double French doors open from the Great Room to the owners’ sitting room with its dominant Flemish-bond brick fireplace set in a wall of rich cherry paneling and library shelves. To the left of the fireplace is a wet bar with white porcelain sink and integrated refrigerator. To the right is a built-in desk and computer work station. There are views of the harbor to the east and the front gardens to the west.

A second set of double French doors separate the owner’s sitting room from a wide foyer/gallery (6’0” x 16’0”*) that leads to the master bedroom, bathroom and dressing room.

- Master Bedroom (21’0” x 22’9”*). The master bedroom has two walls of windows overlooking Polpis Harbor and a set of double French doors leading to the master covered deck.
